The wedding vows of a celebrity couple says a lot about our current society. Instead of the old-fashioned vow of “Till death do us part,” the couple promised to take care of one another “as long as love lasts.” Now really how long will that be.

SHROVE TUESDAY SUPPER

Donations Needed for Orphanage

Thank you to everyone who supported the Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper by purchasing tickets for the event.

Due to the threat of bad weather, we didn't sell as many tickets as we had hoped. For the past six years we have been sponsoring two children at the orphanage in Jeremie, Haiti. To be able to do so again this year, we need to raise $600 more dollars to meet our expenses and cover their sponsorship.

If you, your Sunday school class, or other group is interested in donating to help, contact Susan Curran at scurran@shandon-umc.org.

Outside – you'll always feel an emptiness.

In a world with increasingly popular phrases like “exit strategy” and “keeping my options open,” these vows fit the mold. No matter how those who use such strategies put it, they are saying the same thing – we are not fully committed.

Commitment is the starting point of any relationship. Marriage begins with a vow, a new job with an agreement detailing responsibilities and compensation, and even joining the church involves commitment to God and our fellow church members. Commitment is the foundation on which everything else will be built.

You were created to be in a relationship with God. Outside of that relationship, you'll always feel an emptiness. God wants from us what He has offered us: an everlasting covenant. He wants you to be committed to that relationship. There will be mercy when you fail your end of the commitment and grace when you turn away from that relationship temporarily; but God is always there, He is always faithful to the covenant even when we are not.

The parable of the lost sheep in Luke 15:1-7 tells how committed God is to the relationship with us. A shepherd had one hundred sheep and lost one so he left the ninety-nine behind so he could go and look for the lost sheep. And he looked for the sheep until he found it.

Being committed to God presents itself in many forms. There is prayer, of course, when we really have conversations with God. There is presence in a church family, where we partner with others to accomplish God's mission. There are gifts, where we share freely what God has given us. And there is service where we help carry our weight as the Body of Christ. Those four commitments are part of the outgrowth of a healthy relationship with God, not four tasks that we can check off as a substitute for that relationship.

But still commitments are broken, and we sometimes break our commitment to God. Why? It can be easy to blame the devil when he's not the one at fault. Remember just as Jesus overcame the devil's temptations in the wilderness, God promises that if we lean on Him and His word we can do the same. So what we have to do is resist the devil and trust God by letting him be in charge of our lives.

We have to consider the possibility that we may be the one standing in our own way when it comes to our commitment to God. Could you be allowing a past hurt to prevent you from giving your heart to God fully? Or maybe you are not willing to give up that much control of your life to God. Reflect on where you are and remember God is always faithful, and He is always calling us into the deeper waters of commitment.

In Faith, Michael Guffee, Sr.

IN THE MAKING

Being and Becoming a Disciple of Christ

Being & Becoming Disciples

Forming us into something new as Christ's followers.

Our church is taking strides to shift from a culture of church membership toward one of Christian discipleship. During this Lenten season, a major step in that direction is for our entire congregation to participate in a church-wide campaign aimed at understanding how God is calling us to be formed into Christian disciples as a congregation.

For five weeks, from February 21 through March 20, we encourage any and every person connected to this faith community to join us for the "In the Making" sermon series and accompanying Sunday school curriculum. The sermons will invite individuals to reflect on the extent that they are authentic and active disciples of Jesus, and how they can grow in that direction. The Sunday school material is designed to help classes see themselves properly as disciple-making groups. The five themes of the curriculum sum up the five key principles of Wesleyan discipleship.

This is the perfect time to rededicate yourself to attending worship, or to finding a Sunday school home. You don't want to miss this five weeks at Shandon – not just an exercise of "nice ideas" but a season that sparks transformation.

HAVE YOU THOUGHT OF TAKING ON SOMETHING "NEW" THIS LENTEN SEASON?

BASKETBALL MINISTRY: HONORING GOD ON AND OFF THE COURT

The 2015-16 Basketball Season is complete.

With 21 teams and 201 players in 2nd-12th grades, we greatly appreciate the support of the Shandon congregation, the coaches, and the parents who enabled boys and girls to play on a Shandon United Methodist team. Participation in the Church Youth Basketball League is far more than learning to play basketball as prayer and devotion time are integral components of teaching players to honor God in their thoughts, words, and actions as they serve Him on and off the court. We also appreciate the efforts of our Basketball Committee, Brian Allen, Lawton Blackstone, Joe Stone, and John Tringali, as they serve to coordinate our basketball ministry.

This season we also helped host the SCUMC State Basketball Tournament on January 22-23. With UMC teams participating from across the state, we were honored to serve as a host gym. Among our Shandon teams that participated in the tournament, we are proud to announce that our team of 9th grade boys, coached by Gene Kelley, Edwin Martin, and Mark Smith, won the Jr. Boys State Championship.

As we put away the basketballs and jerseys, we encourage adults to prayerfully consider investing their time and efforts with us next season as a coach/assistant coach for one of our many teams.

HELPING OTHERS... THANK YOU, SHANDON
